Our Story

Terra Vita Global B.V. was established to build something that lasts: a purpose-driven organization that connects people, place, and possibility. From the beginning, our intention has been to do more than “run projects” — we aim to cultivate ecosystems that restore land and dignity, and to shape brands and partnerships that can carry this work across borders.

Our story is rooted in the belief that economic value and ecological healing do not have to be competing goals. Terra Vita’s platform is designed to translate regenerative practice into real-world products, experiences, and scalable models — while keeping ethics, traceability, and community benefit at the center.

What We Do

Terra Vita Global B.V. operates as a regenerative venture builder and project platform. Our work connects three streams into one coherent system:

Regenerative hospitality concepts

Designing and developing nature-rooted stay experiences (eco-farm / B&B concepts) that demonstrate what “regeneration” looks like in daily life — where land restoration, local livelihoods, and guest wellbeing reinforce each other.

Ethical botanical value chains & essential oil development

Building traceable, ethical botanical supply pathways from cultivation to market, including essential-oil and plant-based product development. Our pilot expansion work includes demonstration plots, agroecological trials, and early product prototyping.

Brand, narrative & partnership architecture

Developing emotionally resonant brand systems and communications that attract aligned partners, unlock market access, and sustain long-term trust — from investor engagement to community-facing storytelling.

Our Pilot Approach

Terra Vita is advancing a pilot expansion roadmap designed to validate impact and operational excellence before scaling. Public materials describe a planned pilot in Bathurst, Eastern Cape (South Africa), with additional pipeline work across West and Central Africa.

Pilot workstreams include:

- Demonstration plots and agroecological trials (nursery development and regenerative design).
- Product prototyping and branding for market testing.
- Community training and licensing practices focused on traceability, post-harvest handling, and benefit-sharing onboarding.
- Investor and policy engagement to unlock responsible growth.

Featured Phase-1 species highlighted in public pilot notes include Buchu, Sutherlandia, Aloe vera, and Artemisia afra (African wormwood).

Our Vision

A world where nature-based economies are built on respect — for land, for knowledge holders, and for the people who do the work — and where regenerative development is not a niche idea, but the standard way value is created.

We envision Terra Vita as a bridge between local ecological richness and global demand for natural wellness and botanical products — proving that traceable supply, community benefit, and strong branding can coexist with commercial success.

Our Mission

To develop regenerative hospitality and ethical botanical value chains that heal land, strengthen livelihoods, and build a legacy of trust.

We pursue this mission by:

- Designing pilots that prioritize ecological restoration, financial viability, and human dignity.
- Embedding compliance, traceability, and benefit-sharing into every stage of development.
- Creating brands and partnerships that are emotionally resonant and operationally credible.
- Growing a collaborative network of advisors, regional partners, and aligned buyers.

Our Values

Trust: We do what we say, document what we do, and build relationships that can withstand scrutiny.

Dignity: People are not inputs. Communities are partners, and benefits should be fair and transparent.

Ecological healing: We design for regeneration — soil, biodiversity, water, and long-term resilience.

Traceability & integrity: We prioritize responsible claims, verifiable sourcing, and compliance aligned to applicable standards.

Beauty with backbone: We believe narrative matters — but it must be backed by real systems, data, and practice.

Our Legacy

Legacy is the long arc of impact — what remains after the first pilot, the first product launch, the first partnership. Terra Vita's legacy ambition is to leave behind living systems that continue to generate value ethically: healthier landscapes, stronger local enterprises, and standards of practice that others can adopt.

We define legacy through three commitments:

- Land: measurable restoration outcomes and regenerative land stewardship.
- Livelihoods: skills transfer, fair benefit-sharing, and durable community partnerships.
- Long-term trust: compliance-first, traceable supply chains and transparent governance.

Compliance, Ethics & Traceability

Public pilot materials emphasize an approach centered on respect for indigenous knowledge, fair benefit-sharing, value-chain traceability, and responsible claims aligned with applicable standards and permitting requirements.

Leadership & Team

Terra Vita is described publicly as being led by a lean founding team. The VC4A venture listing identifies Theresa Van Der Walt as Founder & Strategic Lead, with responsibilities spanning vision, compliance architecture, investor relations, and brand/narrative direction.
